

Zone One Energy Unveils New Website

New York City (April 4, 2016): Zone One Energy LLC is pleased to announce that it has launched a new website that will provide an enhanced user experience to both its customers as well as marketing partners.

Zone One's customers will now have their own online portal where they can monitor usage, as well as billing and savings information. Data will be presented both in tabular and graphical formats in order to help customers visualize their consumption history and have a better understanding of how they use their electricity.

Marketing partners will be able to track information about all of the accounts that they enroll with Zone One. Each account's enrollment status, as well as ongoing usage and billing history, will be available for online review or export to Excel.

"It is critical that we provide our customers with a user-friendly online portal where they can track their savings and usage trends," said Ari Green, Chief Executive Officer. "The first step towards identifying ways to reduce electric consumption is having an easy way to trend and understand usage patterns. We are excited to provide our customers with an easy-to-use tool that can provide insights into potential energy savings opportunities."

"Our marketing partners also require a convenient way to access important information about the book of business that they have with Zone One," continued Mr. Green. "By allowing them to view and export the enrollment status of their accounts, as well as historical usage, cost and savings data, we give them the tools to better service their customers. Indeed, we want to be a supplier that not only offers a valuable savings product, but also one that excels in providing outstanding and forward-thinking customer service. The features that our new website provides is a critical component of this strategy."
